OVERVIEW

Introduction

Private voluntary organizations (PVOs)¹ are vital development partners working independently and alongside the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID). The Voluntary Foreign Aid Programs: Report of Voluntary Agencies Engaged in Overseas Relief and Development (VolAg Report) presents an annual overview of their work. As of October 2003, 489 U.S. PVOs and 58 international PVOs were registered and in full compliance with USAID. This report provides a snapshot of each of these PVOs, summarizing their mission, program activities across different sectors and countries, and key financial information, including support, revenue, and expenditures. PVO Web site and e-mail addresses can be found in the Registry section.

Recognizing the Voluntary, Autonomous Nature of PVOs

USAID views PVOs as partners in carrying out long-term sustainable development and humanitarian relief activities. USAID recognizes the independent mission of PVOs as well as their role in implementing USAID's programs. By joining forces, USAID and PVOs can do more together than either could accomplish alone.

One of the challenges inherent in such a partnership is the achievement of the right mixture of collaboration and independence between public and private spheres. A healthy degree of separation between the two is essential for the unique mission of each, but cooperation is also critical to the vitality of both. Thus, interdependence is the cornerstone of the USAID-PVO partnership. In keeping with USAID's emphasis on public-private partnerships, U.S. PVOs registered and supported by USAID must meet a "privateness requirement" legislated by Congress. This means that for U.S. PVOs to be eligible for grants from development-assistance funds, they must show that at least 20 percent of their annual financial resources for international programs come from sources outside the U.S. Government.

Voluntary Agencies: A Tradition of Support for Humanitarian and Development Assistance

USAID recognizes the significant role that PVOs play in providing humanitarian and development assistance in developing and transition countries. Although the PVOs registered with USAID vary markedly in size, scope, and capability, they share a strong commitment to improving the quality of life for people in need. In its work overseas, the PVO community demonstrates the traditional American values of pluralism, voluntary action, and concern for others. PVOs foster sustainable self-help efforts at the community level, providing a direct channel for people-to-people programs that broaden the participation of the poorest citizens in the social and economic decisions that affect their daily lives.

U.S. PVOs' involvement in humanitarian aid began decades ago in response to natural disasters and the social consequences of war. As a result of their ability to respond quickly and effectively, PVOs emerged as leaders in disaster relief. Gradually, their efforts broadened from relief and emergency food distribution to longer-term, more sustainable development programs designed to address the root causes of poverty and disaster mitigation. This transition from short-term relief to long-term development programs strengthened the cooperation between USAID and the PVO community that had been growing since the 1970s. Today, many PVOs work in both short-term relief and longer-term development programs. The effort to bridge the gap between humanitarian and development assistance is increasingly important to USAID programs and, in particular, to crisis mitigation. PVOs have the skills, experience, and innovative approaches to help address these priorities.

While continuing to respond to human needs in emergency situations, PVOs increasingly contribute their private resources to development activities that are essential to helping people in the developing world improve their quality of life. The development programs operated by PVOs promote broad-based economic growth and a more sustainable environment. PVOs also foster human-capacity development, focusing particularly on the attainment of health and education levels required for all citizens to contribute to, and benefit from, economic development. Their work encourages pluralism and the emergence of democratic institutions.

A Shared Basis for Collaboration

PVOs and USAID pursue shared priorities aimed at achieving effective sustainable development. Although the objectives of PVOs are not identical to those of USAID, their work with the Agency contributes to the achievement of USAID's four pillars: the Global Development Alliance; Economic Growth, Agriculture and Trade; Global Health; and Democracy, Conflict, and Humanitarian Assistance. PVOs are actively involved in specific programs to meet Agency objectives in areas such as microenterprise development, child survival and health, natural resource management, civil society and local nongovernmental organization (NGO) strengthening, food security, and humanitarian assistance and disaster relief.

In coming years, USAID will continue to emphasize programs that build strong, free-market economies, stimulate agricultural development, and promote health and well-being. Priority will continue to be placed on programs that bring about economic development and an equitable sharing of resources, while protecting the environment for future generations. Of increasing importance are programs that help fledgling democracies around the world, while facilitating citizen participation and the development of civil society.

¹The term PVO is used to denote private voluntary organizations working with USAID, including both U.S. and international private voluntary organizations, as well as cooperative development organizations (CDOs).

USAID supports strengthened partnerships between and among PVOs and their local NGO partners. By helping to build the organizational capacity of local partners across multiple sectors, PVOs are making a critical contribution to sustainable development. USAID's partnerships with PVOs and NGOs also help empower citizens to take advantage of changes in their own environments, add new energy to development efforts, and strengthen the fabric of civil society. This has resulted in the creation of learning and advocacy networks as well as alliances between nonprofits and corporations, both here and abroad.

Leveraging Private Resources for Development

PVOs make a vital contribution to USAID's foreign assistance programs. As data presented in this report indicate, the private resources devoted to international development by the PVO community exceed support provided by the U.S. Government. During fiscal year 2002, registered U.S. PVOs received $14.5 billion in annual private support, which was more than eight times the amount they received in USAID support, which totaled $1.8 billion. Other U.S. Government agencies and international organizations provided an additional $2.0 billion, bringing the total support and revenue to $18.3 billion. For a detailed breakdown of support and revenue sources, see pages 118-141.

New Policies and Simplified Procedures Strengthen USAID/PVO Collaboration

USAID continues to reform its operating systems. These reforms facilitate improved development performance by emphasizing core values³, simplifying administrative procedures, and eliminating unnecessary layers of bureaucracy.

In recent years, USAID has simplified PVO registration, grants competition, and administrative procedures. These and other ongoing reforms allow PVOs to focus on development work rather than unnecessary micromanagement or unproductive paperwork. USAID handbooks, for example, have been replaced by the more flexible Automated Directives System (ADS), which is available online at the USAID Web site at www.usaid.gov Keyword: ADS. Chapter 303—Grants and Cooperative Agreements—provides important information for the PVO community. Input from PVOs assisted the Agency with revising the ADS 303. Interested parties are also encouraged to visit USAID's Procurement Web site for pertinent information on doing business with the Agency at www.usaid.gov Keyword: Procurement.

Another important reform is cost-share, which has been revised as a result of USAID and PVO participation. The Acquisition and Assistance Policy on cost sharing in grants and cooperative agreements can be found in the Acquisition and Assistance Policy Directives (AAPDs) section of the USAID Web site at www.usaid.gov Keyword: AAPDs.

USAID's newly redesigned Web site is a comprehensive and accessible resource for PVO partners. In addition to the ADS and procurement information, the following can also be found on the Web site: press releases, the USAID telephone directory, the "Results-Oriented Assistance: A USAID Sourcebook," and a directory of USAID awards (the Yellow Book). USAID's Development Experience Clearinghouse located at www.dec.org provides a searchable database of Agency reports and evaluations.

USAID's Office of Private Voluntary Cooperation-American Schools and Hospitals Abroad: A Central Contact Point for PVOs and Competitive PVO Grant Programs

USAID Missions based overseas—together with regional and central bureaus located in Washington—provide the bulk of support for PVOs. The Office of Private Voluntary Cooperation-American Schools and Hospitals Abroad (PVC-ASHA) is the central point of contact for PVOs, collaborating on many issues of importance to maintaining and strengthening partnerships among USAID, PVOs, and local NGOs.

PVC's new five-year strategy, approved in late 2002, articulates important programmatic changes that will guide the Office's work with PVOs and local NGOs. While PVC-ASHA continues to administer competitive grant programs to support its strategic objectives, the Office plans to take on several new roles. For example, PVC aims to become a model learning center, facilitating sharing of experiences, best practices, tools, and techniques in organizational development and sustainability. In addition, a new research, development, and outreach program will draw on PVOs' and NGOs' rich and growing experience in community-based development to disseminate lessons learned and heighten the impact of partner organizations' work.

The merger between PVC and ASHA in early 2003 broadened the Office's scope. ASHA provides PVOs with grant opportunities to strengthen American schools, libraries, and hospital centers abroad to demonstrate U.S. advancements in education and medicine. All of PVC-ASHA's competitive grant programs are described on its Web site at www.usaid.gov Keyword: PVC or Keyword: ASHA.

Finally, PVC-ASHA continues to manage registration of all U.S. and international PVOs who wish to work with USAID, and serves as the secretariat for the Advisory Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid.

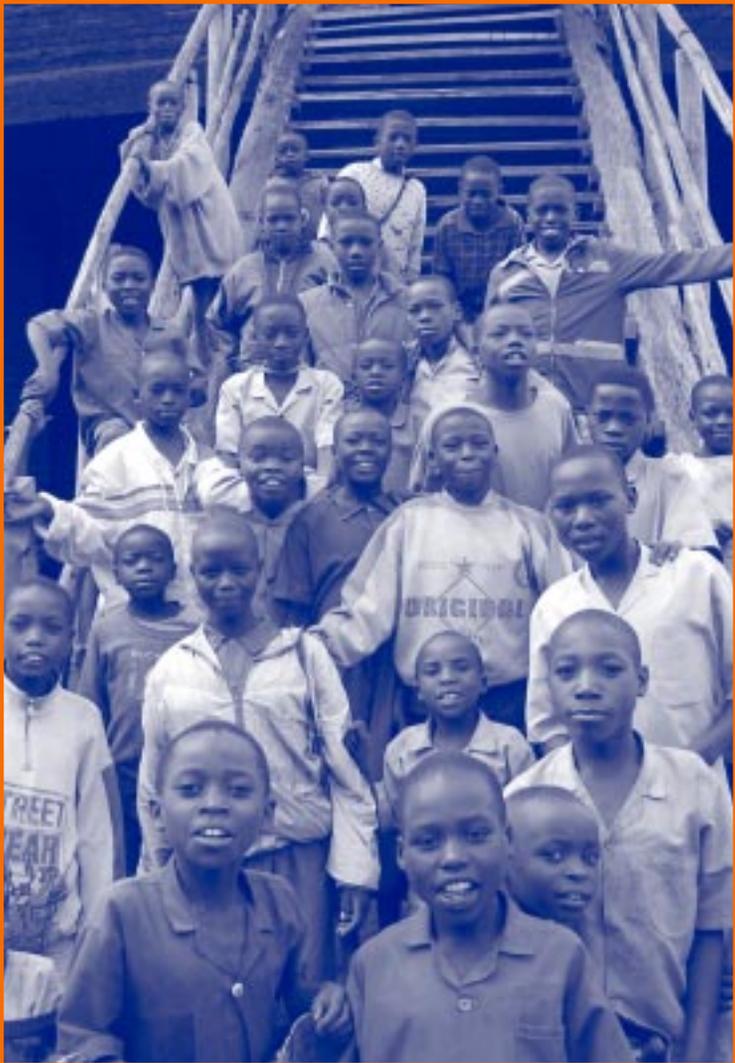

This document, commonly referred to as the VolAg Report, is the culmination of one-year's effort by PVC-ASHA staff to collect, validate, and disseminate a clear and factual report about the PVO community. We hope you find it a useful reference.

Dr. Patricia J. Blair, President

Promotes peace and understanding through institutional and individual capacity building using exchange of ideas, information, and resources. ACTS established chapters with local leadership in the independent states of the former Soviet Union. In 1992, ACTS established the Republic of Georgia's first nonprofit humanitarian aid organization, Acts-Georgia, which exemplifies institutional capacity building and allows Georgians to help Georgians. ACTS has shipped more than $420 million in medication, supplies, and equipment. Diabetic care, emergency and disaster medicine, and women's and children's health are priorities. Sister-city links between Columbia, Missouri, and K'ut'aisi, Georgia, focus on public administration, business, education, health, art, and culture. Sister-links also exist between the University of Missouri and two universities in K'ut'aisi.

Gives people the tools they need to work their way out of poverty. By providing microloans and business training to poor women and men who start their own businesses, ACCION's microlending affiliates help people work their own way up the economic ladder with dignity and pride. ACCION seeks to bring this opportunity to as many of the world's poor as possible by developing microlending institutions that are financially self-sustaining and, as a network, capable of reaching millions of people. ACCION programs overall have made $4.6 billion in loans as small as $100 to more than 2.7 million people. Ninety-seven percent of the loans have been paid back. In 2002, ACCION programs disbursed more than $800 million in loans averaging $548 to microentrepreneurs in 19 countries in Latin America, the Caribbean, and Africa and in 30 U.S. cities and towns.

Since the disastrous Armenian earthquake in 1988, the association has spearheaded several multimillion-dollar projects. AMAA headed up a renewable energy infrastructure in Armenia; two mobile medical clinics; assistance to schools and universities; and the establishment of a theological seminary for the training of pastors and church leaders. Other projects include a special child-care program for orphaned, handicapped, and poor children; summer camps; and the distribution of medical supplies, powder milk, and food supplements. AMAA operates in the Armenian communities of Armenia, the New Independent States, the Middle East, Europe, Australia, North America, and South America.

Promotes permanency planning for children—first, within their own countries and cultures, and then, through international adoption if the first is not possible. Bethany's philosophy is to provide development support to existing programs in the country or to partner with in-country programs. The country then develops a new program that assists children and families and prevents institutionalization of children. Bethany provides counseling services, adoption, temporary foster care, and medical care. The organization also works in partnership with the government to ensure sustainability when Bethany's work is completed. Bethany pursues these goals through educational partnerships with universities, sending volunteers to the field, hiring qualified indigenous people, and providing local training programs.

Engages all Americans in promoting the well-being of children, youths, and their families and the protection of every child from harm. Established in 1920, CWLA is the nation's oldest and largest membership-based child welfare organization. CWLA is an association of more than 1,100 public and not-for-profit agencies devoted to improving life for more than 3.5 million at-risk children and youths and their families. CWLA's international office addresses practice, program, and policy concerns of CWLA member agencies about the global needs of children and families. The office also advocates international excellence in child welfare and promotes international professional exchanges and collaborations that contribute to a universal knowledge base of child welfare ideas and actions.

Ms. Nancy Bearg, President and CEO

Provides business development services to small-scale producers in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. With local and international partners, EWW develops business plans for basic industries that transform the economies and livelihoods of small-scale farmers and microentrepreneurs. EWW programs use a business-like approach to enterprise creation and development based on the "value chain," the steps of production, processing, and marketing along which value is added to products. By helping small producers obtain the expert advice, value-adding technologies, and access to credit already enjoyed by their larger competitors, EWW programs level the playing field and enable microentrepreneurs to develop their own competitive business advantage.

Mr. Craig Kennedy, President

Makes grants in Central and Eastern Europe (CEE) that promote cooperation between the United States, Western Europe, and the newly democratic countries of CEE in the areas of political, economic, and environmental reforms. Grants are made to independent nongovernmental institutions that encourage analysis and transatlantic dialogue on issues regarding security, foreign policy, and the development of civil society. Other grant recipients include institutions that strengthen public participation in the political decision-making process. Furthermore, GMF gives grants to institutions that provide young politicians and journalists the opportunity to develop leadership abilities through fellowships and professional development exchanges between the United States and Europe.

Ms. Jo Luck, President and CEO

Works to end hunger and poverty, one community at a time. HPI has projects in 48 countries, including the United States. HPI provides dairy cows, goats, water buffalo, llamas, bees, other animals, and tree seedlings to farmers who request assistance in sustainable farming and livestock management. HPI provides training in livestock management and animal health, as well as in sustainable farming and environmental protection. Each recipient "passes on the gift" of animal offspring, seeds, or skills to another farmer in the community. The animals become an ongoing source of food, draft power, fertilizer, and income. They also serve as an economic incentive to plant erosion-controlling trees and grasses. HPI conducts programs in five geographic areas: Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America, and North America.

Mr. Paul Polak, President

Improves the lives of the rural poor in developing nations through agricultural economic development. IDE views rural farmers as entrepreneurs capable of producing high-value crops with the right help. IDE empowers the rural farmer to pull himself out of poverty by providing essential tools, such as training, technologies, capital, and market entry. IDE focuses on water as a starting point for alleviating poverty. Simple, low-cost water technologies improve agricultural production and increase market participation. Designing, producing, and disseminating affordable technologies, IDE puts technologies to use in rural areas to benefit the poor. IDE's efforts have resulted in some two million families having access to low-cost water technologies, which have directly enabled them to become more efficient agricultural producers, increasing their annual net income by between $100 and $1,000.

Ms. Rebecca Williams, Executive Director

Collects surplus medical supplies and equipment and donates it to public and charitable hospitals in developing countries. By placing these products in the hands of qualified recipients, MEDISEND serves as the logistical link transforming America's medical surplus into an economic benefit with lifesaving impact abroad. All medical supplies and equipment are donated by medical manufacturers, hospitals, and physicians. MEDISEND works throughout Asia, Africa, Latin America, and the Near East, and collaborates with other nonprofit, international assistance agencies. Shipments are based on recipients' needs, a thorough qualification process, and available inventory. MEDISEND has positively affected health care services for children, women, and men in more than 55 countries on five continents.

Conserves orangutans and their Bornean rainforest habitat. Formed in 1986 with this as its goal, OFI is a member of the Orangutan Conservation Forum, a consortium of groups that are working to counter the primary threats to orangutan survival throughout Indonesia. OFI works in concert with these groups on five top-priority issues: 1) stopping illegal logging and mining and ending the illegal conversion of land into palm oil plantations, 2) increasing sustainable economic alternatives for communities surrounding critical orangutan habitat, 3) assuring sustained funding for long-term in-situ orangutan research, which is vital for effective conservation efforts, 4) creating and implementing education programs to instill pride in orangutans and their environment, and 5) releasing ex-captive orangutans into suitable, protected habitat.

Dr. William Higdon, President

Empowers poor communities worldwide to solve their most urgent problems and increase their level of self-sufficiency. OI selects, trains, and supports indigenous community organizers to facilitate this process throughout Asia, Africa, the Caribbean, and the Americas. Community residents become the main actors in every phase of their own development—from identifying needs and priorities to planning, implementing, and evaluating solutions. Communities address a variety of issues, including health, education, and livelihood. A community organizer works in a village for approximately five years or until the community has developed the skills and confidence necessary to sustain the development process.

Dr. Carmen Gannon, President

Organizes volunteer specialty medical teams that provide free medical assistance to the medically disadvantaged people of Guyana, South America. Project DAWN teams give direct patient care through inpatient and outpatient services and provide consultations for more complicated cases, both in the clinic in Georgetown, Guyana, and in the outreach facilities. Team members provide an informal teaching program in the hospital and clinic settings, through direct one-on-one teaching and conferences, to benefit medical students and house officers. All equipment and supplies for treatment and surgeries have been donated, gathered, and shipped to Guyana through the efforts of Project DAWN.

Mr. M. Sam Myhre, Executive Director

Provides assistance to refugees in Africa. From 1977 to 1993, Project Mercy's programs provided material aid, refugee resettlement, educational aid, and support for Ethiopian refugee evangelists. During the past ten years, Project Mercy's work has focused on developmental work in Yetebon, a rural village. The organization is addressing health issues by providing a 28-bed hospital, which will soon open, and is educating children in kindergarten through ninth grade. Project Mercy also provides education and training in literacy, agriculture, road construction, fresh water supply needs, and other skills. In 2002, Project Mercy assisted in emergency food relief efforts. During the 2003 Ethiopian famine, the organization helped to feed more than 253,000 people in southern Ethiopia. Project Mercy's support for Ethiopian refugee evangelists in Djibouti and Sudan continues.

Addresses blindness in the developing world in a way that is unique among global humanitarian organizations. ORBIS had its first DC-8 "Flying Eye Hospital" mission in 1982, which clearly established this uniqueness. ORBIS has established a corps of more than 300 top-level volunteer ophthalmologists who have conducted more than 530 programs worldwide and trained more than 63,000 eye-care professionals. In the process of training these individuals, more than 130,000 patients have had their eyesight restored or preserved. In addition, ORBIS has introduced a telemedicine project, which enables volunteer faculty members to use the Internet to provide patient consultation and Web-based educational material to ophthalmologists around the world. ORBIS's country-based programs are located in China, India, Bangladesh, Ethiopia, and Vietnam.

Develops and promotes better strategies for achieving the goals of adequate diet, health, housing, improved education, employment, and rights for all residents of poor countries. SID focuses on rural development because better strategies are needed to alleviate rural poverty, and environmental and agricultural goals must be combined in order to achieve them. SID also focuses on decentralization and citizen participation, which is a new sector that lacks the strategies, methods, and materials of more mature sectors. Additionally, SID is developing methods for helping citizens take a greater role in improving the education of women and children.

Empowers people by demonstrating that in helping others, we can unleash extraordinary power that will affect all of our lives for the better. TFL does this by enabling people around the world to help plant fruit trees in developing countries. Each tree protects the environment and provides a low-cost, self-renewing food source for many people. TFL's activities include three elements: education, health, and environment. Since TFL's inception in 1984, millions of people have participated in its programs, and tens of millions of fruit trees have been planted. TFL has active programs in India, Guatemala, and Haiti. Its educational program, Global Circle of Knowledge, enables people to create lessons in almost any language. The lessons can be tailored to many learning styles, and TFL can share them through the Internet with people worldwide.

Ms. Vicki Tsiliopoulos, Executive Director

Empowers the poor in developing countries by providing access to information, strengthening local institutions, and introducing improved technologies. VITA supports entrepreneurship in the private, public, and community sectors, facilitating information exchanges within and between them. VITA implements short- and long-term projects in microfinance, rural credit, cost recovery, business development services, and information systems, and operates an international disaster information and education program. Additionally, the organization fosters low-cost connectivity and knowledge of networks, including VITA-Connect, a unique, remote-area, satellite-based communications and information network that targets the needs of frontline humanitarian, development, human rights, and conservation organizations.

Mr. Steve Werner, Executive Director

Helps people in developing countries improve their quality of life by supporting sustainable drinking water, sanitation, and hygiene education projects. WFP strongly believes that project beneficiaries, men and women, must be involved actively in all aspects of a project to nurture local autonomy, initiative, management, and ownership. WFP promotes cost-effective technologies that use locally available materials and that can be sustained with the resources of the benefiting communities. WFP aims for situations where its partner organizations in developing countries have the capacity to work effectively and independently without WFP's support.

Mr. Peter Knights, Executive Director

Provides direct protection for wildlife in danger. One of WildAid's primary goals is to address the illegal wildlife trade so that endangered species and their habitats are protected. Rather than carrying out extended research, WildAid has frontline programs that directly address the entire trade cycle from poaching, to smuggling, to consumption. WildAid builds capacity within foreign organizations to protect parks and help local communities find alternatives to economic growth. WildAid fights illegal trade through specialized wildlife units and lowers demand for wildlife products by raising awareness and changing consumer behavior through mass media campaigns. The organization has offices in the United States, United Kingdom, Russia, Thailand, Cambodia, and the Galapagos Islands.

PRIVATE VOLUNTARY ORGANIZATIONS

SUMMARY OF ACTIVITIES AND PRIVATENESS PERCENTAGES (FY 2002)... 115

The U.S. private voluntary organizations (PVOs) presented vary in size from several thousand dollars to several million dollars in support and revenue from private, U.S. Government, international agencies, and in-kind donations. For the past several years, the Foreign Assistance Appropriations Act has included the following provision regarding PVOs.

None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act for development assistance may be made available to any United States private voluntary organization, except any cooperative development organization, which obtains less than 20 percent of its total annual funding for international activities from sources other than the United States Government.* The 20-percent requirement does not apply to

- Non-U.S. PVOs
- Cooperative Development Organizations
- Economic Support Funds (ESF), Disaster Assistance, or Other Non-Development Assistance (DA) Sources of Funding.

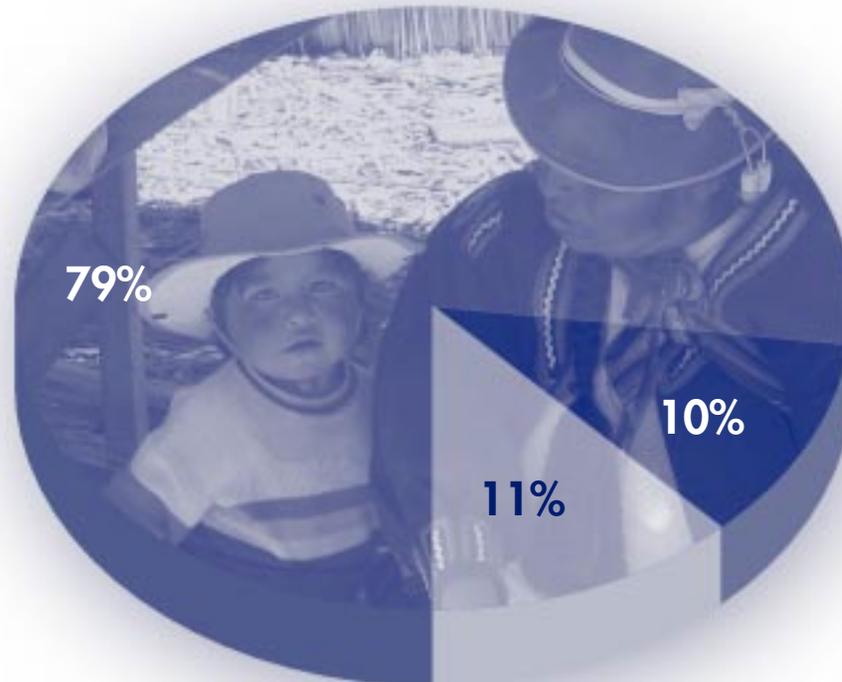

* The Privateness Percentage computation is based on overseas expenses reported by the PVO on its financial statements. This percentage excludes expenses for USAID-initiated activities.

Mr. Olivier Longue, General Manager

Works in approximately 40 countries on 5 continents with teams of fieldworkers bringing together more than 320 professionals: specialists in the fields of nutrition, agriculture, water and sanitation, and public health. A group of journalists and intellectuals created ACH in Paris in 1979. ACH relies on the skills of its local teams of nearly 4,500 people to develop programs that are well adapted to the needs of its beneficiaries. ACH's prime objective is to assist the most vulnerable and, secondly, to raise public awareness in developed countries about the scale of hunger. Ultimately, ACH aims to enable the beneficiaries to regain their autonomy and self-sufficiency as soon as possible.

Mr. Benoit Miribel, Executive Director

Fights hunger by providing emergency assistance and by linking relief and development in five areas of expertise—nutrition, food security, health, disaster preparedness, and water sanitation. ACF intervenes, whether during a crisis through emergency programs, or after a crisis through rehabilitation programs. ACF also integrates a disaster-preparedness approach designed to reduce vulnerability and to strengthen capacities of local communities to respond to crises. Together with its three sister organizations, ACF works in 40 countries worldwide. The organization also engages in public education and advocacy efforts relating to hunger issues around the world.

Alleviates poverty through supporting relief, rehabilitation, and development initiatives. DAI, an international Christian organization, prefers to work with local partners instead of operationally. In relief work, DAI responds to man-made and natural disasters by providing food, water, clothing, medical help, and temporary shelter. Rehabilitation programs are designed to help displaced people resettle. In development, the focus is on building the self-reliance of the poor. The sectors for DAI's development work are agriculture, water, health, housing, and economic development. Women and children are given special attention, as they are often more vulnerable to poverty.
